<!-- ARTWORK 1 -->

<h2>A Sunday Afternoon on the Island of la Grande Jatte</h2>

Painted between 1884–1886, this masterpiece by Georges Seurat uses pointillism to portray Parisians relaxing by the River Seine, blending countless tiny dots into a vivid, harmonious scene.

<!-- ARTWORK 2 -->

<h2>Earth rise </h2>

Earthrise is a photograph of Earth that was taken from lunar orbit by astronaut

William Anders on December 24, 1968, during the Apollo 8 mission

<!-- ARTWORK 3 -->

<h2>Moonlight Delivery</h2>

The image is a surreal, nighttime scene set in a grassy field. Under a dark, star-filled sky, two figures dressed in white appear to be handling large glowing spheres that resemble moons.

<!-- ARTWORK 4 -->

<h2>Reflection at Dusk</h2>

This watercolor painting depicts a tranquil natural scene, likely a landscape.

In the foreground, there is a stretch of lush greenery, possibly meadows or fields.

A body of water (a pond or lake) reflects the sky above.

<!-- ARTWORK 5 -->

<h2>The Fall of Icarus</h2>

This painting is traditionally attributed to Pieter Bruegel the Elder.

It interprets the myth of Icarus, who fell into the sea after flying too close to the sun, but here his death is a minor detail overshadowed by the ongoing labors of daily life.
